Furthermore, microfiltration membranes are finding increasing use in areas such as petroleum refining, in which the removal of particulates from flue gases is of particular concern. The key challenges/requirements for this technology are the ability of the membrane modules to withstand high temperatures (i.e. maintain stability), but also the design must be such to provide a very thin sheeting ...

1. Introduction. The production of petroleum based plastics has a big disadvantage of generating non-degradable waste products (Akaraonye et al., 2010).The non-biodegradable nature of these products, due to their high molecular mass and complex structure imparts a high environmental burden as they can remain in water bodies, soil and landfill for many years.
