Solar gain (also known as solar heat gain or passive solar gain) refers to the increase in thermal energy of a space, object or structure as it absorbs incident solar radiation. The amount of solar gain a space experiences is a function of the total incident solar irradiance and of the ability of any intervening material to transmit or resist the radiation.

Solar energy represents our largest source of renewable energy supply. Effective solar irradiance reaching the earth's surface ranges from about 0.06 kW/m² at the highest latitudes to 0.25 kW/m² at low latitudes. Fig. 1 compares the technically feasible potential of different renewable energy options using the present conversion efficiencies of available technologies.
